MAKING HEADLINES: a conversation with the journalists behind Queensland's biggest stories

What or who makes headlines?

Across sport, politics, business, and lifestyle – behind all big splashes and breaking news crosses – is a journalist or a team of them.

This June, the Kennedy Foundation, in partnership with Telum Media, will host an exclusive event with some of the most exciting names in Australian journalism. These Queensland news-breakers have told stories to fascinate, shock and delight – but certainly, all have piqued the public interest.

Join us on Thursday, June 8th at 6pm, as we meet four of the best in the business over a candid panel conversation covering their careers and the changing face of Brisbane at the impressive new Suncorp headquarters. The event will be an opportunity to learn about journalism techniques and careers from experts in TV, radio, print and digital journalism – but also a chance for media professionals in Queensland to network and meet peers across different beats and organisations. If you are in town don't miss this opportunity

Panelists are Kat Feeney, Robert "Crash" Craddock, Alison Sandy, Ben Smee and

moderated by Kennedy Foundations Kate Allman

WONDERFUL MELBOURNE

Our first Kennedys on the Road event of the year held on April 20 was a roaring success.

In partnership with Telum Media we hosted the event in the nations' sporting capital, Melbourne. A host of PR professionals and journalists attended to network and engage in a spirited discussion about sport and the business of modern sports media.

An all-star line-up of Australia's best sports broadcasters and journalists joined board member Kate Allman on stage for a lively panel discussion. Gerard Whateley, Abbey Holmes and Catherine Murphy shared funny, inspiring and memorable anecdotes about their careers, the ethics of sports media and sponsorship, and their roles in calling some of the nation's biggest sporting moments.

We at the Kennedy Foundation are a national organisation that aims to connect our media peers and assist in creating journalism networks across all Australian states building a presence in Melbourne is an important part of this strategy.
